

Profile: Linsey Jamieson – Associate Case Manager, Wolverhampton

Linsey Jamieson is a qualified teacher with a wide range of experience supporting young people with complex disabilities within mainstream and specialist educational settings. Over the past six years Linsey has worked as a Personal Learning Co-ordinator for clients with a wide range of complex disabilities, including those who have experienced traumatic brain injuries, have chronic progressive conditions, learning difficulties and cerebral palsy.

Linsey has recently started working as a Case Manager. She also continues to work in an independent specialist college part-time. She has built up a wealth of experience in setting up individualised programmes incorporating education, therapy and life skills goals, in order to support people to successfully transition into living in the community, sustainable work and increasing their independence. Linsey's role has involved providing initial assessments, setting targets and training support staff to deliver a personalised life skills curriculum based on future goals and aspirations. This includes extensive liaison with families, statutory services and large multi-disciplinary teams. She has an excellent understanding of statutory services, access to education, developing "Education, Health & Care Plans", and adapting educational provision to meet the needs of a child or young adult.

Linsey is adept at setting functional goals, always working in a person-centred manner and understanding how clients needs will develop and change over time. She has a wealth of experience working with clients with limited communication, users of AAC and clients with multiple and complex disabilities. She is a skilled manager, with an approachable manner and a pro-active and creative approach to problem solving. Linsey's skill set and previous experience means she is well equipped to support children and young adult clients, particularly those transitioning between different education settings, new accommodation or into voluntary or paid work.

She has worked as a volunteer listener with Samaritans for four years and has implemented active listening strategies and a sound awareness of mental health issues to support clients, and their families, in a holistic and sensitive manner. Linsey is committed to ensuring that her clients are placed at the centre of decision making and that they are working towards functional and achievable goals with a supportive and committed support team.

Linsey has a strong track record of ensuring successful outcomes for clients such as achieving sustainable work outcomes, developing independent living skills, returning to mainstream education, securing suitable accommodation and planning holiday or activity trips abroad.
